OFSTED said (October 23): "The ambitious curriculum begins in the early years. It is designed to close gaps in children's knowledge quickly. Children explore and take managed risks. Adults develop children's speaking and listening skills through well-timed interactions. Children practise what they have learned. Children enjoy looking at books and read alone, or with a friend, in a cosy, quiet space. They show high levels of determination and concentration. Routines for learning are well established. Children have a positive attitude to learning. Children achieve well in the early years."
